

American Academy of Physician Assistants in Allergy, Asthma, and Immunology

From the desk of Bill Sanders MS PA-C, AAPA-AAI President

Greetings from North Florida! I'm happy to say we've had beautiful weather lately. I can't believe half of the 2015 year is gone. Before you know it our annual conference will be here, and I believe it will be the best yet!

I have been a PA since 1988, and since that time I have seen our profession evolve into the great organization that it is today. I am amazed and impressed by the diverse and varied areas where PAs practice today. From jobs in clinical medicine and the vast amount of specialties available, to jobs in education, research, legislation, military and even overseas work, the opportunities seem endless. The growing need for healthcare in our country has led to an increased demand for PAs and NPs, and this has been a great thing for us.

I came from an emergency medicine background, having been a paramedic in Orlando and then a flight medic with the University of Florida in Gainesville. I got involved in allergy medicine in 1993 while moonlighting as a PA in the ER. In June of 2000, I opened my own allergy clinic with the help of a supportive staff and a supervising physician. It's not the path I chose when I started, and it's a long story with lots of struggles, but things have turned out well. The name of my practice is Allergy & Urgent Care, and we combine allergy medicine with urgent care. In the small town where I work, one has to find other ways to generate revenue in order to survive. And speaking of other revenue, I also work as a PA provider in the Army Reserves. This, I find, is a nice break in the normal routine. I spent most of 2008 in Iraq and then half of 2009 at the Pentagon. Both were good experiences and my supervising physician covered the clinic while I was gone. Another job I have is working as an adjunct instructor at the local college. I teach some of the medical classes to allied health students. I find this enjoyable and it keeps me connected with the students.

It may sound like I'm super busy but it's actually a nice balance that keeps me challenged and stimulated. I am grateful for my profession that has allowed me to venture into other areas. So, whether you are a PA or NP, embrace your profession because the opportunities really are endless!

See you in Arizona!!

AAPA-AAI Mission

- Promotes the growth and development of physician assistants who have an active interest in the field of allergy, asthma, and immunology
- Provides the general membership with a forum for informal assembly regarding the issues that relate to physician assistants in allergy, asthma, and immunology
- Develops and maintains a speakers bureau for the Academy and its members
- Facilitates mutual assistance and support of physician assistants, health professionals, and health services by organizing and disseminating health care information through forums, panels, and other similar programs concerning the delivery and quality of health care services.

A Different Approach... Working in Academia

By Susan Symington, DFAAPA, MPAS, PA-C

– Immediate Past President AAPA-AAI

This year I chose to make a switch back to academia and decided to begin teaching in a PA program again. I had a discussion with one of my colleagues today about what other professions PA's have decided to go into. Some PA's are becoming Dean's at universities, CEO's of companies, hospital administrators, etc. The majority stay in clinical practice, which is a good thing as well. There are some, like me, who decide to go back to PA school again. For those of you who may be

The retirement is excellent and so are all of my other benefits. Becoming a PA faculty member isn't for everyone but for me I can say that in the last 3 months, since taking my current full-time position at MEDEX, I have educated over 200 PA students on asthma and the importance of when to refer patients to an allergist when practicing in primary care. I wondering if this is something you might want to explore, I would encourage you to explore it. There are advantages to being in education. I still practice once a week in an allergy practice in Seattle, Washington. This is encouraged on the professorial track. There are other things that are encouraged, such as, publishing, speaking at a local, regional, and national level and becoming active in your community. This is all on top of practicing clinically and teaching duties. I do enjoy it and am happy to be back in the classroom and thinking about research projects and other topics to write about for have also been able to educate those same students on ENT diagnoses and when a referral to an otolaryngologist is needed. It's great to be an expert in our field of publication. My greatest passion in life is educating patients, students, and fellow colleagues and I am able to do all of these things with my current employers. For me it is enriching and it gives me purpose. I also, selfishly, am hoping to educate these students well, as some day they will be taking care of me. I also have the benefits of being at a large university; The University of Washington.

allergy and I feel very blessed and privileged to have this opportunity. I'm giving back to our profession what my patients, colleagues and students have taught me over the years. Feel free to contact me if you have any questions or are interested in discussing my journey back into education.

CME, Cutting Edge Knowledge, Networking...

A message from the CME Chair - Gabriel R. Ortiz, MPAS, DFAAPA, PA-C

This year we will be at the same hotel as our first CME meeting in 2007.

This is a great site, and now they have a casino.

This year our Incoming President Brian Bizik will open the conference with a review of the new rhinitis guidelines. We will also have several up to date topics to include Alpha-Gal, Eustachian tube dysfunction, dizziness and rheumatologic masqueraders.

On Saturday we will have two timely lectures on oral immunotherapy tablets and oral immunotherapy for food allergies, by two leading researchers in the field of allergy/immunology. We will also have a new speaker this year, Randy Danielson, who has been in allergy/immunology for many years give a lecture on VCD-unmasking the asthma pretender.

We will have two breakfast product theaters and two lunch product theaters, provided by CSL Berhring, MEDA and Teva, helping to support our conference.

On Sunday Dr. Maeve O'Connor will be back by popular demand to give two lectures on Integrated Medicine and Atopy and the use of biomarkers in asthma. We will also have Dr. Adrian Casillas give two lectures on Mastocytosis and Eosinophilic Esophagitis.

We will have the same popular workshops to learn about skin testing, PFT's, rhinoscopy-basic and advanced, patch testing and punch biopsy.

I hope to see all there!

ELECTIONS COMING JULY 2015

Do YOU have great ideas to share?

Do YOU have great leadership skills?

Do YOU want to get more involved?

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED BECOMING A BOARD MEMBER?

There are two available positions on the board of directors...

President Elect - President Elect is a two year position that allows one year preparation for Presidency. The current Board of Directors is hoping a candidate bringing great ideas to our organization will step up. This job is not very demanding and a great opportunity to leadership experience. Any of our Past and Current Presidents would be happy to share their experiences with you. Description is below:

The President Elect shall automatically succeed the preceding President as President of the Corporation, and the outgoing President shall remain as a voting member of the Board for one (1) year as the Immediate Past President. The President Elect shall, in the absence or disability of the President, perform the duties and exercise the powers of the President, and shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the Board. The President-elect shall organize and conduct, with the assistance of the Secretary, all annual elections and serve as chairperson of the Elections Committee, and shall perform such other duties as assigned by the President or the Board.

Director at Large - Is a great position for beginning board members looking to be more active. Director-at-Large shall participate in board meetings, serve as an advisor on topics related to the AAPA-AAI and shall perform such other duties as shall be assigned by the President of Board of Directors. Term 2 years.

Please let us know immediately if you are interested by sending a brief description of why you are interested in the position to our Executive Director, Monique Ochoa. Elections will take place prior and during the Annual CME Meeting. Thank you for considering it.
